

Chapter 12

Historical Judicial Buildings and Architecture

Section 1 Judicial Office Building (First Office Building)

Our Office is located within the first and second floor of the southeast side of the Judicial Office Building. The Judicial Office Building reflects its' 1930s architecture during the era of Japanese colonial rule, and is appurtenant to the southern side of the Office of the President compound located within the Bo Ai Special District. The current site of the Judicial Office Building is located near the Small South Gate (Chong Hsi Gate) which was built during the Ch'ing dynasty as Taipei emerged, which had a Wu Temple dedicated to the God of War (Kuan Kong), located opposite a Wen Temple dedicated to Confucian rites which is now the campus of the prestigious Taipei First Girls High School). The Kuankong temple was demolished in 1929 to build the Hall of Justice which took five years' and was finished then opened in 1934. The Hall was named the High Court of the Taiwan Government-General, and the High Court, Taipei District Court and Prosecutors Office were all located in the High Court of Justice building. When the Nationalist Government relocated to Taiwan in 1950, the Judicial Yuan and the Supreme Court moved to this location which is now called the Judicial Office Building.

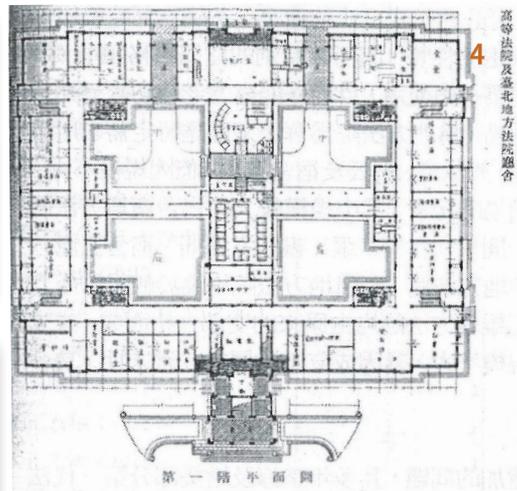

The Judicial Office Building is a partly steel frame and partly reinforced concrete structure, which was designed by Kaoru Ide (President of the Taiwan Architecture Association), chief of the Construction Section of the Taiwan Government-General. The entire edifice adopts the shape of the Kanji character for Japan (or day, sun), along a central axis symmetrical configuration, similar to the adjacent Office of the President (the Formosan Government-General headquarters during Japanese sovereignty), with an elevated tower in the middle and symmetrically spread forth on both sides, and large atriums to the north and south. The façade has light green ceramic tiles, with columns of arches inside giving it an Arabesque feel. The center tower top curve is inverted, so it looks like a military helmet with the image of Japanese style home eaves. Some think it represents a metaphor for the authoritarian mentality during the rule of the Japanese. The central tower front was originally inlaid with the national emblem of Japanese chrysanthemums, which was changed to a clock after the takeover of Taiwan.

During the era of Japanese sovereignty, the front wall of the Formosan Government-General High Court (Office of the Prosecutor) was emblazoned with 18 decorative petals of the Imperial Emblem of Japan (above). After the takeover of Taiwan, this was changed to a clock (image below from 2009)/ from the Taiwan National Heritage Committee Study Group

The Hall of Justice as originally a three story building, but in 1977 a fourth story was added to serve as the Grand Justices offices and for use by the Constitutional Court, and each floor covers some 1800 ping (about 35.6 square feet/ping). From the front entry one ascends a large stairwell to the lobby area. The lobby features 12 marble octagonal pillars, so the area is called the "Hall of Pillars". After passing the Hall of Pillars, turning left one follows the corridor along the central atrium, which is where our Offices are located. On July 30, 1998 the Judicial Building was formally declared a historical building by the Ministry of the Interior.

I. Office Buildings

Our Office is located to the southeast of the Judicial Building in the first and second floor, with the offices of the Prosecutor General, the Head Prosecutor (including the Deputy Chief Prosecutor), prosecutors, Chief Secretary, Office of Administration, and conference and meeting rooms for various events or symposia, and the Prosecutors Research office.

II. Investigative Hearing Room

In accordance with Article 4 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, our Office has original jurisdiction over cases involving sedition, treason, or interference in foreign relations; and for cases involving reconsideration, when a prosecutor deems it necessary, they may also sua sponte order re-investigation. Our Office's original hearing chambers in Investigation Room 1 are antiquated given the state of the art demands for investigation, and to ensure the investigative environment is conducive to complete contemporary high tech equipment and amenities. In 2018, the entire chamber was remodeled, and the work was completed in January 2019, with the room once again being used for prosecutors to conduct their interrogations.

III. Service Center

To better service the citizenry's needs for an accessible judiciary, our Office allotted a budget for a dedicated Service Center on the back of the Judicial Building on Bo Ai Road in Taipei on the first floor as a single point of contact able to accept documents, accept judicial papers, provide legal counseling, accept public petitions (complaints), assist victims of major crimes and felonies to lodge complaints, and provide access to judicial documents.

Section 2 Second Office Building<sup>1</sup>

To the southwest of the main Judicial Building, there is a grey four story building (No.124-1, Sec. 1, Chongqing S. Rd., Zhongzheng District, Taipei City) which serves as our Office's Information Building, and which our colleagues refer to colloquially as the "Sixth Bureau". The building was originally a single story edifice, but in 1958, the Fourth Section (Medical Examiner Section) of the Sixth Bureau (predecessor to the Forensic Medicine Unit) of the Ministry of Justice Investigation Bureau was established, borrowing the single story building for pathology examinations, autopsies, forensic evidence analysis and document examination operations. In October 1964, the site was redeveloped into an office building to serve as the MOJ Investigation Bureau's Crime Technology Study Center, and the Sixth Bureau also moved in, until 1980, when the MOJ Investigation Bureau Headquarters Technology Building was built as No. 74, Zhonghua Rd., Xindian Dist., New Taipei City, and the Sixth Bureau moved out. But the use of "Sixth Bureau" to refer to the building has remained common to the present. Later, the Sixth Bureau building was renamed to reflect the moving in of our Office's Information Management Office, and the building began to be called the Information Building. With its four floors, over time it incrementally began to witness the moving in of our Office's Enforcement Section and Office of Administration, to help alleviate our Office's cramped quarters in the Judicial Building. The first floor houses the Enforcement Section and the Enforcement Prosecutor Office, along with the Records Section, Documentation Section, Seal Imprint Room and the Bailiff Office; the second floor includes the Personnel Office, Civil Service Ethics Office, Records Section, Economic Crimes Investigation Center, Computer Crimes Prevention Center, and former Document Transcript and True Copy Section (now terminated); with the third floor housing the Accounting Office, Statistics Office, and Research and Evaluation Section, and the fourth floor officing the Information Management Office and the Technological Surveillance Office. On September 3, 2019, our Office started operations at the Bo Yi Building, namely the Third Office Building, except for the Records Section and Seal Imprint Room which remained at their original premises, the Enforcement Section and Office of Administration moved into the Third Office Building facilities.

Our Office's Investigation Data Center and Intellectual Property Branch are located at No. 143, Yanping S. Rd., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City on the campus of the northern administration section offices of the National Communications Commission, and for our files and dossiers after scanning, they are stored in the Tucheng archival warehouse in Tucheng, New Taipei City.

Section 3 Third Office Building<sup>2</sup>

As our Office's operational duties have constantly increased, budget allotted slots have concomitantly risen, and the original office space has become sorely inadequate; so from July 1, 2008, after establishment of the Intellectual Property Branch, our officing requirements grew even more, and our Office applied to the National Property Administration to borrow No. 143, Yanping S. Rd., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City, where the fifth floor could serve as offices for the new Branch, and the sixth floor could house our Office's Data Section, Prosecutor Investigator Office, and Nationwide Drug Database, with the temporary lease being renewed every quarter from the National Property Administration. While this interim arrangement provided temporary respite to the overcrowding, the office space was spread out and inefficient to manage, so to provide for a uniform solution the Ministry of Justice resolutely determined to find a completely appropriate location. As the Ministry of National Defense was about to move into its Bo Ai Base in Dachih, the Bo Yi Building at No. 164, Bo Ai Rd., Taipei City, would become available as an ideal site for prosecutorial offices. In accord with the July 4, 2011 directive of the Executive Yuan, EY No. 1000098958, permission was granted for use of the Bo Ai building after the Ministry of National Defense moved out, for our Office and the Taiwan Taipei District Prosecutors' Office (hereafter, Taipei Prosecutors' Office) to make use of the site. Since the building was located right behind the Office of the President, and its exterior was very old, in September 2015, the former Minister of Justice, Lo, Ying-Hsueh, assisted in obtaining NT$20,000,000 for refurbishing the building which was complete in March 2016, giving the entire façade a completely new appearance. Also, former Minister Chiu, Tai-San, and former Political Vice Minister Chen, Ming-Tang, also aided our Office in obtaining approval from the Executive Yuan for a budget of NT$468,075,000 to cover moving costs, and with the leadership of our Office's former Chief Prosecutor Wang, Tien-Sheng, former Chief Secretary(Prosecutor) Chief Secretary Chen, Chuan-Tsung, and former Chief Secretary(Prosecutor) Chief Secretary Wu, I-Ming, the work of moving in was incrementally completed.

Since prosecutorial entities are quite different from the typical administrative agency, the Third Office Building refurbishing and design required emphasizing its' durability, safety and high quality. In accordance with the procurement procedures, our Office commissioned the Hsieh, Chien-Hua Architecture Firm to prepare the overall planning and design to ensure its' practicality, beauty, modernity and solemnity. Also, to assure the project quality and construction safety, our Office signed a contract with the MOTC Freeway Bureau which specializes in project management, to handle the responsibilities for supervising procurement for the Third Office Building dormitories and old office refurbishing, with the work performed by the winners of the procurement tender, the Taiyi Construction Co., Ltd. and the Chengchung Engineering Co., Ltd. After work began on August 28, 2018, the contractors endeavored assiduously to overcome all obstacles to converting former military buildings and the difficulties encountered along the way, to complete the project on August 20, 2019, ahead of schedule, and formally open the new facilities for use on September 3.

At the opening, distinguished guests included Tsai, Ching-Hsiang, the Minister of Justice, Chen, Ming-Tang, Political Deputy Minister, Tsai, Pi-Chung, Political Deputy Minister, Chang, Tou-Hui, Administrative Deputy Minister, Chiang, Hui-Min Supreme Court Prosecutor General, Wang, Tien-Sheng, our Office's Chief Prosecutor, Hsing, Tai-Chao, Taipei District Chief Prosecutor, Director Cheng, Ming-Chien of the Agency Against Corruption, MOJ, Hung, Shu-Min, Director General, Intellectual Property Office, MOEA, Director Chao, Hsing-Hua Freeway Bureau, MOTC, our Office's Sung, Kuo-Yeh, Deputy Chief Prosecutor, and Intellectual Property Branch Head Prosecutor Chen, Wen-Chi, were all present for the joint opening of our Office's Third Office Building, the Taipei District Prosecutors' Office Third Office Building and the Intellectual Property Branch unveiling of the formal brass plaque dedication nameplates. Invitations were also extended to the Bureau and Section chiefs of the Ministry of Justice, the Prosecutors General of the High Prosecutors branches, the Prosecutors General of the Shihlin, New Bei, Taoyuan, Hsinchu, Yilan, Keelung, and Nantou District Prosecutors' Offices, the Chief Judge of the Taiwan High Court, the Chief Judge of the Intellectual Property Court, and the Chief Judge of the Taiwan Taipei District Court, among more than sixty distinguished attendees for the opening ceremonies at the august occasion.

The Third Office Building covers an interior space of 18,570.59 square meters, with the first and second floors dedicated to the Taipei District Prosecutors' Office, and the third and fourth floors housing our Office's Personnel Office, Accounting Office, Statistics Office, Research and Evaluation Section, General Affairs Section, Information Management Office, Data Section, Documentation Section, Prosecutor Investigator Office, and the Nationwide Drug Database, while the fifth floor hosts our Office's Civil Service Ethics Office along with the new location for the Intellectual Property Branch. The project budget for refurbishing the Third Office Building was very substantial, and represented the largest to date for the judiciary, and our Office was able to witness its' timely construction and completion ahead of schedule.

Section 4 Electronic Monitoring Center Facilities

I. Historical origins

With the ever advancing state of the art in science and technology, and to prevent persons not in custody or on bail from absconding, during the prosecutorial investigation or trial phase, on July 3, 1029, amendment of Article 116-2, Paragraph 1, of the Code of Criminal Procedure, adding Clause 4, was adopted providing that defendants may be subject to appropriate electronic monitoring as alternatives in lieu of physical custody and detention. To meet these new requirements, The Judicial Yuan and The Ministry of Justice convened a meeting to discuss the establishment of Electronic Monitoring Center and reached a consensus to entrust Taiwan High Prosecutors Office to build it. The location of the center is at the second floor of the old building of Taiwan Shilin District Prosecutors Office. To establish the Electronic Monitoring Center (EMC), with an area of 142.4 ping at a cost of NT$287,000,000. The contracting was completed by the Chung Hwa Telecom Co. Taiwan Northern Region Telecom Co., and finished on December 20, 2020. The equipment and Information Technology system project was finished April 30, 2021, by the FarEastOne Integrated Systems Co., with the EMC facility having a Main Surveillance Monitoring Room, Supervisor's Room, and Case Status Meeting Room, along with Case Status Meeting Room 2, Chief's Office, monitoring personnel office, files office and garage, as well as the Standby Room and Computer mechanical room, to provide tracing and tracking, positioning, and GPS location high tech surveillance monitoring, in a space which is full of a sense of science and technology, having bright and simple color matching and neat metal decorative lines, for an atmosphere of high quality and high tech. The main monitoring room has a large 7x3 wall monitor composed of 21 thin displays, providing EMC staff with real time defendant tracking. The Center aims to achieve a balance of respect for defendant's rights and an appropriate amount of criminal procedure.

II. Hardware installations

The EMC is designed with an information mechanical room (with backup information mechanical facilities), electrical power, air conditioning, firefighting, surveillance, controlled access, internet, front end surveillance equipment, back end surveillance systems (including remote backup mechanism, during aberrant episodes the system must completely activate to the remote backup mechanism within 25 minutes), mobile installed APP platforms requirements for software and hardware, and environmental control. The system architecture installed with the environmental monitoring system includes real time surveillance, energy management, automated smart controls, aberrant status reporting, distant management, and efficiency factor management along with the solution suite's full graphical integration platform which can coordinate data from the various monitoring equipment in the computer room, and instantly reflect on-site environmental conditions, including temperature and humidity, fire protection, UPS, electricity, air conditioning, liquid leakage, video monitoring, and controlled access status. Through this comprehensive system, the EMC's complete functionality, convenience and integration can be deployed to display information security data, creating a fully modern and practical information security monitoring work space. Moreover, to satisfy the computer room requirements for full-time uninterrupted service throughout the year, the computer mechanical room adopts a dual-circuit independent mutual backup power supply system, is equipped with an independent 150KW soundproof generator set for emergency backup power use, and adopts cold and hot channels, for high efficiency and energy savings. The dedicated cabinet-type refrigeration system for the computer room is designed conforming to the Uptime Institute Certification Tier III level design, and the overall computer room energy efficiency value (PUE, Power Usage Effectiveness) does not exceed 1.6, achieving both high efficiency and energy savings.

Section 5 Reconstruction of Offices

Our Office is faced with the dual problems of old office space and inadequate facilities, so to satisfy existing requirements reconstruction efforts are essential, including planning for procurement of design and supervision of technical service and construction standards, so as to improve the existing poor office environment as expeditiously as possible

Planned improvement projects include the Judicial Building first and second floor ceiling replacement, the Second Office Building first through third floor restroom renovations, relocation of drinking fountains, the first through fourth floor ceiling replacement, addition of steel safety barriers on the roof, replacing door frames and fourth floor partition wall demolition, repair of the external wall on the fourth floor and water leakage repair work in the basement, addition of aluminum alloy cable racks on the first to third floors, the addition of the Head Prosecutor suite and prosecutors offices on the second floor, and addition of a Meeting Room on the second floor; Third Office Building 3rd and 4th floor conference rooms, and the 4th floor library. The planning and design principles adopted are as follows:

1. Create a practical office space that is beautiful, solemn, and symbolizes the integrity of the public trust and has complete modern facilities and equipment.
2. Ensure compliance with all regulations governing design of buildings, architectural technologies, interior design rules, and environmental protection requirements.
3. Assure a spatial organization and movement arrangement providing convenience for the public contact, and meet all functional and use requirements of our Office for investigating crimes and initiating prosecutions, while improving overall work efficiency.
4. Deploy ample use of natural ventilation and lighting for energy savings.
5. Fulfill the five benchmark factors of strength, functionality, safety, appearance, and environmental friendliness.
6. The spatial design must fully consider citizenry needs of those with different abilities and different genders, by re-examining existing spaces and establishing user-friendly and barrier-free environments, meeting different needs based on gender or disparities caused by physical and mental challenges, and conforming with basic requirements of all relevant law and regulations (for accessible environmental design and gender equality design).

7. Give priority for use of green label building materials; electricity, water-use equipment, appliances and other business equipment compliant with energy-saving, environmental or water-saving labels.
8. Pre-plan the overall project progress appropriate schedule.
9. Make sure construction processes are carried out in a way to minimize adverse impacts on colleagues' office work, movement lines, protective measures, assure low noise, and minimize environmental impacts.
10. Guarantee that this project uses easily maintainable building materials with high practicability and durability.
11. All amenities must considers safety and management convenience for colleagues' use and future activities.
12. The information building is currently in use, so minimize effects of work and restrooms repairs by conducting them in appropriate increments, avoiding any serious adverse impacts.
13. Adequately and efficiently use budgeted sums for practical refurbishment projects.
14. The project should amply consider integrated interfaces.
15. For any necessary design changes, ensure the appropriate regulations are applied governing procedures for the approval of changes.
16. Task technical service and construction manufacturers to collaborate with our Office at all times to handle necessary assistance for the project, including any inspection, audits, evaluation and presentations to superior entities, and provide services until all the construction completion acceptance documents for the project are final and accepted.

This major reconstruction project began in August 2020, under the full supervision of the Chief Prosecutor with the General Affairs Section holding weekly project meetings to assist in dealing with various problems that were encountered. The entire project was finally completed on November 13, 2020. The office environment has been fully renewed, creating a more suitable office space for our colleagues, and allowing our Office to improve the quality of justice, uphold social justice, and benefit greatly in terms of quality and performance in case handling and promotion of the rule of law.

I. Judicial Building ( First Office Building )

(I) Judicial Building first and second floor ceiling replacement project

This project lasted from October 1, 2020 to November 13 of the same year, at a budget of NT$914,650 to replace the first and second floor ceilings of the Judicial Building, which had become too old and infested, adversely affecting colleagues' health.

Section 6 Official Duty Dormitory Reconstruction

I. Status quo

Our Office currently houses staff in official housing dormitory space located in three dorm facilities at: (I) Ln. 51, Sec. 2, Hangzhou S. Rd., Daan Dist., Taipei City with 26 units (among which 5 are on permanent loan to the Taiwan High Court ); (II) Ln. 99, Xiamen St., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City with 28 units; and (III) Boai Rd., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City, with 4 units. After deducting the units on permanent loan to the High Court, there are a total of 53 units.

We also have three dorms for administrative personnel, located at: (I) Ln. 38, Zhao'an St., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City, with 7 units; (II) Chongqing S. Rd., Zhongzheng Dist., Taipei City, at the Judicial Village Two, with two units; and (III) Ln. 39, Zhulin Rd., Yonghe Dist., New Taipei City, with 8 units, for a total of 23 units.

II. Former Chief Prosecutor dormitory repair project

Our Office's former Chief Prosecutor's official residence was located at 021-0000 cadastral plot in Subsection 4, Chinhwa Section, Da An District, Taipei, which was borrowed from the Taiwan High Court in 1966 for use as official residence to be built for the Chief Prosecutor, and construction began on March 17, 1967, which was completed on June 23, 1967. After construction of the dorm was complete it was used by a number of Chief Prosecutors, until it was eventually abandoned in 1993 after the Hangchow South Rd. official dormitories were put into use. Since the Chief Prosecutor residence had not been repaired over 28 years, and given environmental considerations, it was determined to conduct refurbishing.

On May 11, 2021, the Chief Prosecutor visited the site of the official residence of former officeholders, and directed that the site be transformed into individual dorm units, with the first and second floors each housing six to seven rooms. At present the plans call for removing waste and once cleaned up, the branches and leaves of the trees will be properly trimmed, then funding will be raised for restoration of the official duty dormitory and property.
